Have you ever wanted to start a career where you're respected and appreciated?

Do you want to help your community and your country?

Do you want to be a leader and role model?

Are you physically fit?

If so, you may have what it takes to become a Wildland Fire Fighter!

The United States Forest Service, Southwest Region, is seeking a small group of career focused women to be on-call Wildland Fire Fighters for the 2013 fire season. These on-call positions will provide support to Wildland fire operations over the summer when needed and can help pave the way for future employment and career advancement inside of the Forest Service. If you are selected for this opportunity, your first assignment will be a Women in Fire Boot Camp. The Boot Camp will provide comprehensive, formal physical Wildland Fire Training and orientation. Upon successfully completing this training each person will receive a Wildland Fire Fighter certification and protective gear.

Position Details

These positions are administratively determined (AD) emergency positions. If selected, you will be paid for the Boot Camp training and your physical fitness test, also known as work capacity test. This basic firefighting training and the Work Capacity Test are required in order to meet National Wildfire Coordinating Group Red Card qualification as a Wildland Fire Fighter. Persons selected to these positions will provide temporary emergency support on wildland fires and other emergency operations nationally as well as throughout the Southwest. Once selected for this work you will need to remain on call. The main duty stations will be located in Phoenix, Arizona, and Albuquerque, New Mexico. However, you may be expected to travel within the Southwestern Region or across the country, on short notice for work assignments lasting up to 21 days. Please note this is an intermittent position with a workload entirely dependent on fire conditions both in the Southwest and across the Nation. This position does not guarantee any kind of permanent work but it is a good starting point for those interested in a career with the Forest Service.

While on wildland fire assignments, you may be expected to be away from your home for an extended period of time. You may be exposed to primitive living conditions such as camping in wilderness areas away from electricity, showers, and with no cell phone reception for days on end. On the other hand you may be placed in hotel rooms with all the amenities in downtown areas of major US cities. Operating vehicles both on and off road, hiking, commercial flights, boat rides, and mission flights on helicopters are just some of the modes of transportation to be expected on the job.

Wildland Fire Fighters can operate in close proximity to open flames, heat and smoke. The work can be physically demanding requiring up to 16 hour work days for up to 14 days in a row without a day off. The work consists of hiking, carrying heavy equipment, operating fire apparatus, working near heavy machinery, and using hand tools such as shovels, Pulaskis, and chainsaw, sometimes in high stress situations. Respect, flexibility, understanding, crew cohesion, and teamwork are the foundation of any good fire fighter. Exhibiting these principles both on and off the clock is expected.

Major Duties

- Participate in training.
- Participate in physical fitness.
- Keep yourself and your equipment fit for duty, in response ready condition.
- Remain on call for response to wildland fires and other emergencies.
- Travel and work 14- and possibly 21-day assignments, possibly out of the state.
- Safely engage in wildland fire suppression and other emergency response operation activities.

About the Region

The Southwestern Region consists of approximately 2,800 fulltime employees on 11 national forests and 4 national grasslands in New Mexico, Arizona, and the panhandle area of Texas and Oklahoma. The southwestern U.S. is one of the most diverse and rapidly growing regions of the country. In 1997, New Mexico became the first state in the continental US in which "minority groups" collectively represent over 50 percent of the state's population. This "minority-majority" demographic situation is an indication of the complexity, diversity, and opportunities that we face to carry out our mission: "caring for the land and serving the people." Our programs represent the full complexity of resource management in the Forest Service, with an emphasis on customer service and contributing to the southwestern quality of life.
